

Title: Poured on Purpose

Text: “He went to him and bound up his wounds, pouring on oil and wine. Then he set him on his own animal and brought him to an inn and took care of him.” (Luke 10:34)

Target: God heals when truth and power meet in the same place.

Discussion Questions: Feel free to settle on one question if it connects at a deeper level.

The goal is not to finish the questions in speed; the goal is to apply the truth of Scripture to your life and situation. (Much Love...P.E.)

1. Conversation That’s Redirected

The lawyer asked Jesus a question about eternal life, but Jesus redirected the conversation to expose his heart rather than just answer his curiosity.

- Where do you see yourself tempted to seek correct answers without allowing God to bring real change?
- What might Jesus be trying to redirect in your own conversations with Him?

2. Conscience That Rationalizes

The priest and Levite saw the wounded man, had the right position, and were in the right place, but still passed by.

- What are some ways believers today can “see” brokenness but still rationalize not stopping?
- What priorities most often cause us to pass by instead of step in?

3. Compassion That Responds

The Samaritan didn’t just feel compassion; he moved toward the wounded man and stayed involved.

- Which action of the Samaritan challenges you the most: going to him, carrying him, staying with him, or paying for him?
- What would it look like for compassion to move you beyond emotion into costly obedience this week?

4. Combination That Reveals (Oil and Wine)

The Samaritan used both oil and wine—cleansing and healing together.

- Why is it dangerous to offer truth without the Spirit, or the Spirit without truth?
- Where have you seen “bandages” offered instead of gospel healing—in yourself, the church, or culture?

5. The Takeaway: “Bandages cover wounds, the gospel heals them.”

- Who in your life right now may need more than advice, fixes, or sympathy, but needs the healing power of the gospel?
- What would it look like for you to be someone God uses to bring both truth and power into their situation?
